

FORESTRY IN MISSISSIPPI

The Economic Impact of Forestry and the Forest Products Industry on Mississippi's Congressional Districts

The Forest and Wildlife Research Center at Mississippi State University was established by the Mississippi Legislature with the passage of the Renewable Natural Resources Research Act of 1994. The mission of the Center is to conduct research and technical assistance programs relevant to the efficient management and utilization of the forest, wildlife, and fisheries of the state and region, and the protection and enhancement of the natural environment associated with these resources. FWRC scientists conduct research in laboratories and forests administered by the University and cooperating agencies and industries throughout the country. Research results are made available to potential users through the University's educational program and through Center publications such as this, which are directed as appropriate to forest landowners and managers, manufacturers and users of forest products, leaders of government and industry, the scientific community, and the general public. Dr. George M. Hopper is director of the Forest and Wildlife Research Center.

Introduction

The forestry and forest products industry makes a substantial economic contribution to each of Mississippi's four congressional districts. The forest products industry impacts an economy in a number of ways ranging from jobs, wages, and purchases in local economies to local, state and federal taxes. The purchase of goods and services by this forest products industry and its employees spurs economic activity in other sectors of the economy resulting in a substantial cumulative economic impact. For example, in Mississippi, forestry is a 10.4 billion dollar industry, and in 2010 forestry related employment accounted for 4.2% of all jobs in Mississippi (Dahal et al. 2012). Given the contribution generated by the forest products industry to the Mississippi economy and the economic development potential, there is great interest in understanding the contribution of the forest products industry to the economies of each of Mississippi's four congressional districts. This study estimates the economic impact of forestry and forest products by congressional district.

Methods

The economic impacts of the forest products industry were modeled using IMpact Analysis for PLANning (IMPLAN), an input-output model (MIG 2004). The IMPLAN model was originally developed by the USDA Forest Service in cooperation with the Federal Emergency Management Agency and the University of Minnesota to estimate the regional economic impacts of management plans for National Forests (Alward et al. 1985).

The IMPLAN model tracks inter-industry spending and summarizes the economy into a 440 industry sector model. For reporting purposes the results of this analysis were simplified by combining the 440 sectors to 17 sectors representing the entire economy including the 5 forestry and forest products related sectors (Table A.1).

Using input-output analysis to track how the inputs of one sector of the economy are the outputs of other sectors can allow for a greater appreciation of the economic importance of a sector or group of sectors to the overall economy. Using 2011 data IMPLAN V3.0 software, this study estimates the total economic contribution of forestry and the forest products industry within Mississippi's four congressional districts (Figure 1).

This is measured by examining how spending by the forestry and forest products industry impacts the entire economy using four key statistics: employment (the number of full- and part-time jobs), income (employee compensation), total industry output (total value of production), and value-added (payments made to workers, interest, profits and indirect business taxes). For each of the four key statistics the direct, indirect, induced, and total economic impacts were estimated. The direct impacts are the actual expenditures and employment of the forestry and forest products industry sectors (forestry services, logging, solid wood products, pulp and paper, and wood furniture manufacturing). The direct impacts are then used to measure how the purchase of goods and services by the forest products industry's supporting industries (i.e., indirect impact) and the purchases of consumer goods and services by employee households associated with direct and indirect effects (i.e., induced impact) generate a total economic impact.

Results

The key findings of how forestry and forest products impact the economy of Mississippi's congressional districts are presented in detail in Tables 1, 2, 3, and 4. The associated federal, state, and local tax impacts are presented in Tables 5a and 5b.

The forestry and forest products industry in Mississippi's 1st Congressional District has a total economic impact amounting to 34,088 jobs and $1.6 billion in income during 2011. That's 9.4% of jobs and 10.7% of income in the district. Forestry and the forest products industry generated $5.9 billion, or about 12.1 %, of total output in in the district. Total industry output is defined as the value of all goods and services produced in the district. Value-added amounted to over $2.4 billion or 10.6 % of all value-added in the district. Value-added represents the creation of new wealth, and is inserted into the economy through payments made to workers, interest, profits and indirect business taxes. In addition, the tax impact was estimated to be $417.7 million with $278.2 million in federal and $139.5 million in state and local taxes.

In the 2nd Congressional District, forestry and forest products has a total economic impact of 6,927 jobs and $284.6 million in income. That amounts to 1.9% of jobs and 2% of income in the district. The value of output produced by the forest products industry was $1.4 billion, which is over 3% of the district's total output, and value-added was $442.4 million or just over 2% of the value-added generated in the district. The associated tax impacts amounted to $87.1 million with $51.9 million in federal and $35.2 million in state and local taxes.

The employment and income impacts resulting from the forest products industry in Mississippi's 3rd Congressional District summed to 10,905 jobs and $489.3 million in income. The employment and income impacts account for 2.8% of jobs and 3.1% of income in the district. The total output and value-added impacts are also very considerable. Forest products generated $2.1 billion in output and $710.1 million in value-added. That corresponds to 4.1% of total output and 2.8% of value-added for the district. Additionally, the tax impact was estimated to be $138.8 million with $85.1 million in federal and $53.7 million in state and local taxes.

Mississippi's 4th Congressional District also benefits from the forest product industry as evidenced by an economic impact amounting to 7,237 jobs and $334.8 million in income. That represents 2% of jobs and income in the district's economy. The total output and value-added impacts amounted to $1.5 billion and $522.7 million, respectively, which amount to 2.4% of output and 1.9% of value-added generation in the district. The tax impact amounted to $99.6 million with $57.3 million in federal and $42.3 million in state and local taxes.
